REGISTRATION

Members of the Representative Body and Council will register at the Royal Dublin Society, Ballsbridge. Other members attending the Annual Meeting will register at the Reception Room in the Mansion House. Ladies accompanying members of the Representative Body and Council will register at the Ladies' Club, 80, St. Stephen's Green. Other ladies accompanying members will register with the members at the Reception Room.

LADIES ACCOMPANYING MEMBERS

Adequate arrangements have been made for the comfort of the ladies accompanying members to the Annual Meeting. The Ladies' Club will be at Lord Iveagh's house, 80, St. Stephen's Green, which is a short distance from the Reception Room, Trinity College, and University College. Morning coffee and afternoon teas will be served in the club. Ladies accompanying members of the Representative Body and Council will register their names and will be supplied with badges at the Ladies' Club. They are requested to call at the club as soon as possible after their arrival in Dublin. Ladies accompanying other members will register at the Reception Room at the Mansion House, where they will be supplied with badges. They are then requested to call at the Ladies' Club to register their names. This is essential in order that the visiting ladies may be informed of the detailed programme arranged for their entertainment.

REDUCED RAILWAY FARES TO DUBLIN

For the convenience of members attending the Annual Meeting in Dublin, the railway companies of Great Britain (excepting the Metropolitan, Metropolitan District, and London Electric Railway Companies) will issue return tickets for both classes at the ordinary single fare and one-third for the double journey, fractions of 3d. being reckoned as 3d. On application to the Financial Secretary members may obtained a signed voucher, which must be surrendered when the ticket is purchased. This voucher, issued by the English Railway Clearing House, will apply from stations in Great Britain to the Irish ports by railway-owned steamers, by the boats of the Belfast Steamship, British and Irish Steam Packet, and the City of Cork Steam Packet Companies, and by the boats of Messrs. Burns and Laird Lines Ltd. If the journey to Dublin involves rail journey on the Irish railways it will be necessary to produce at the time of booking a second voucher enabling members to take advantage of the reduced fare facilities offered by the Irish companies. The return journey on the Irish railways can be completed at the following rates: Great Northern Railway (I.), single fare and three-eighths; Great Southern Railways, single fare and one-half; other Irish railway companies, single fare and one-third.

TRAIN AND STEAMSHIP SERVICES

It is assumed that members travelling to Dublin from London and the South will use the Euston terminus of the London Midland and Scottish Railway. From this station members have the choice of two routes: (1) a day or night service via Holyhead and Kingstown, and (2) a night service via Liverpool. For the former journey the Irish Mail leaves Euston at the following times:

	Weekdays		Sunday
London (Euston) ... ... dep.	*8.30 a.m.	†8.45 p.m.	†8.45 p.m.
Dublin (Westland Row) ... arr.	6.0 p.m.	6.35 a.m.	6.35 a.m.

* Restaurant car train. † First- and third-class sleeping accommodation

For the journey via Liverpool the service is as follows:

Weekdays.

London (Euston) ...	... dep.	*6.5 p.m.
Dublin (North Wall)	... arr.	6.0 a.m.

* Restaurant car train.

There is no Sunday service via Liverpool.

So far as the train is concerned it is expected that ample accommodation will be available. On the steamers, however, accommodation will be strictly limited. It is suggested, therefore, that members making the night journey via Holyhead and Kingstown who require cabins or berths should communicate at the earliest opportunity with the District Passenger Manager, Euston Station, informing him of the date and train service selected, class travelling, and the type of sleeping accommodation required on the steamer. For members taking the alternative route via Liverpool application should be made to the British and Irish Travel Agency, Ltd., 29, Cockspur Street, London, S.W.1.

MOTORING FACILITIES

Cars may be parked at convenient points in the city during the various functions. The police and the patrols of the Automobile Association and the Royal Irish Automobile Club will guide members in this matter.

Garages for members' cars are available, and information as to these can be obtained from the representatives of the Automobile Association and the Royal Irish Automobile Club in the Reception Room.

A "B.M.A." adhesive badge for the windscreens of members' cars will be provided by the automobile Association. These may be obtained from A.A. patrols or from the representative at the Reception Room.

IMPORTATION OF MOTOR CARS INTO THE IRISH FREE STATE

The motorist wishing temporarily to import a car into the Irish Free State will be well advised to seek the assistance of the Automobile Association or the Royal Automobile Club, as without this he is likely to encounter considerable trouble as well as delay at the ports of importation and exportation. Every motor vehicle is subject to Customs duty, and before importation may take place this must be deposited. Arrangements may, however, be made through one of the leading motoring organizations whereby a heavy cash deposit with the Customs may be avoided and a triptyque (Customs permit) may be obtained which will secure the entry and exit of the car without delay.

In addition to the formalities attendant on passing the Customs, it is necessary to comply with the Irish Free State registration and licensing regulations, and here again the services of one of the motoring organizations are almost indispensable, as without the international motor vehicle and driving permits which they are able to supply a motorist cannot use his car in the Irish Free State until he has re-registered it and obtained ordinary driving licences, as the British licences are not valid in the Free State.

Apart from these essential services, all arrangements for shipment are made, including the reservation of car space and cabin accommodation, the issue of passenger tickets and car freight vouchers, thus relieving the motorist of all responsibility and trouble once his tour has commenced. Uniformed officials meet the motorist at the principal ports in Great Britain and the Irish Free State, attending to all formalities on his behalf and thus ensuring that he is not inconvenienced in any way.

According to the route chosen for shipment the all-in cost of taking a car to the Irish Free State, including the issue of the requisite documents, etc., varies between £9 and £12, but this may be reduced by £2 if two passengers accompany the car on both the outward and the return journeys.

MUSEUM

The Museum will be located in the School of Anatomy in Trinity College. The Museum Committee, of which Professor T. T. O'Farrell is chairman, with Dr. John Lait and Dr. W. R. O'Farrell as secretaries, has arranged a series of specimens illustrating the work of the Sections and also objects of general interest to be viewed during the Annual Meeting. A catalogue has been prepared, and will be available for each member visiting the Museum.

HISTORICAL EXHIBITION

This exhibition, which consists of books, pictures, and instruments, illustrates the history of medicine in Ireland and elsewhere. It will be located in a room close to the Museum in Trinity College.

HOBBIES EXHIBITION

An Exhibition of Doctors' Hobbies is being arranged. In it will be shown examples of the arts and handicrafts of local doctors, as well as specimens from their collections of pictures, books, antiquities, etc. As it will be of general interest, ladies accompanying members to the Annual Meeting are invited to visit it. A catalogue, which is also a souvenir of the Dublin Meeting, will be presented to each visitor.

DEMONSTRATIONS AND VISITS

A number of demonstrations and visits to hospitals, etc., have been arranged for the early afternoons of Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday. Particulars of these will be published in the Handbook of the Meeting.

ANNUAL DINNER OF THE ASSOCIATION

The Annual Dinner of the Association will be held in the Gresham Hotel, Dublin, on Thursday, July 27th, at 7 for 7.30 p.m. The price of the ticket is 12s. 6d., exclusive of wines. Each member of the Association attending the dinner is entitled to apply for one additional ticket for a guest at the same price. As accommodation will be strictly limited, members are invited to apply as soon as possible for tickets to the Honorary Secretaries, B.M.A. Meeting, Royal College of Physicians, Kildare Street, Dublin. Applications for one or two tickets may be made with or without a cheque for the necessary amount. In the latter case a place will be reserved, but the dinner ticket will not be supplied until payment has been made, which may be done at the ticket counter in the Reception Room at the Mansion House, up to the evening of Wednesday, July 26th. If application for one or two tickets is accompanied by a cheque for the necessary amount, a numbered ticket will be sent to the applicant by post before the commencement of the Meeting.

ACADEMIC DRESS

A limited number of robes, gowns, hoods, and caps of the two Universities and of the two Royal Colleges may be hired from Mr. Walter Conan, 44, Kildare Street, Dublin (National University, Royal College of Physicians, and Royal College of Surgeons), and Messrs. F. and E. Thompson, 14, St. Andrew Street, Dublin (Dublin University, Royal College of Physicians, and Royal College of Surgeons). Members who wish to hire robes from these firms are requested to make early application to them, as the number is strictly limited.

The robes, etc., of other universities and colleges cannot be supplied locally. It will therefore be necessary for members to obtain them before coming to Ireland. A large selection is kept by Messrs. Ede and Ravenscroft, 93-94, Chancery Lane, London, W.C.2, official robe-makers to the Association, or they may be obtained from the officially appointed robe-makers of the various universities and colleges.

Members bringing with them academic costumes for their own use, whether their own property or hired for the occasion, will have no difficulty as regards duty, as these will be classed as personal luggage. If, however, such robes should be sent by post or otherwise, they will be liable for duty. For this reason it has been impossible to arrange with Messrs. Ede and Ravenscroft to have a selection available in Dublin for hiring.

MOTOR COACH TOUR OF IRELAND

Arrangements have been made for a nine days' tour of Ireland by motor coach, to commence from Dublin on Sunday, July 30th, and to terminate in Dublin on Monday, August 7th. This tour will conveniently fill in the interval between the end of the Annual Meeting and the commencement of the Royal Dublin Society's Horse Show on Tuesday, August 8th.

On the first day of the trip the route includes Glendalough, Avoca, and Waterford, and terminates at Tramore. On the second day Youghal, Cork, Blarney, and Glengarriff are visited. On the next day much of the most beautiful scenery of Kerry is seen on the road from Glengarriff to Killarney. A complete day is allowed for seeing Killarney, and on the next day Limerick and the Shannon Scheme will be visited en route to Galway. On Friday, August 4th, Connemara will be traversed on the road from Galway to Sligo, passing through Clifden, Kylemore, Leenane, and Westport. On the next day the border is passed and, after entering Northern Ireland, another of Ireland's beautiful lakes, Lough Erne, will be seen. On Sunday, August 6th, the tour proceeds from Enniskillen by way of Londonderry, Portrush, the Giant's Causeway, and the magnificent Antrim coast road to Belfast. An inclusive charge of £1 5s. per head would cover all these, or participants may pay for such of the special trips as they desire.

This tour, which has been carefully thought out, will provide for visitors to Ireland a splendid way of seeing the country under the most comfortable conditions. The motor coaches are first-class vehicles, with sunshine roofs, and the couriers accompanying the party are familiar with all the details necessary to guarantee the comfort and enjoyment of those taking part.

As accommodation is limited, those who intend to join in the tour are asked to communicate as soon as possible with the organizers, the Irish Omnibus Company, Ltd., D'Olier House, D'Olier Street, Dublin.

A GENERAL MEDICAL SERVICE FOR THE NATION

DISCUSSION AT BLACKPOOL

Dr. ALFRED COX, in opening the discussion on a general medical service for the nation at the Preventive Medicine Section of the Royal Sanitary Institute Congress at Blackpool on June 30th, said he assumed that all would wish that all the resources of medical science should be available to every citizen of this country. It had been a dream of his since he was a general practitioner in a poor industrial town, where it used to worry him to send bills to people who he knew could only pay them by the exercise of an austere honesty and practice of economy that he feared would not be within his capacity were he in their place. The complexities and cost of a complete medical service had steadily increased. In most cases which defied the diagnostic and technical skill of the general practitioner, it seemed as if the patient ought to go through the hands of several specialists before one could be sure that everything had been done which ought to have been done. The public was more alive to the situation than it used to be, but it seemed to him to be axiomatic that it was the medical profession, which naturally understood it best, which should find a solution, or at any rate tell the public how it thought a solution ought to be found. Dr. Cox then went on to explain the broad outlines of the scheme which was worked out by the British Medical Association some time ago. A scheme, he said, was wanted which would gather together all the various means, individual and institutional, for the promotion of health and the cure and alleviation of disease and make them available to everybody. When a man was ill he was not in the least interested in the theoretical benefits of a scheme to the people as a whole. His sense of communal solidarity (if any) was apt to be obscured for the time being. He wanted to be made well. Any proposals for a medical service would have to start from that bedrock fact. The B.M.A. Committee, which was composed of men and women in daily contact with sick human beings, laid it down as the first requisite that every individual should be supplied with a family doctor—that is to say, a man or woman chosen by himself who, in his opinion, was the most suitable available doctor for him. Given the necessary money, all the other factors of the service could, without difficulty, be added to the family doctor, who was the corner-stone of the structure. The easiest and most logical way of financing the scheme would be to put the whole service on the rates and taxes. The B.M.A. proposals favoured (i) an extension of the national health insurance system whereby dependants of the present insured persons would get the medical benefit now available; (ii) an extension of that service so that it would include all kinds of specialist and auxiliary non-institutional treatments; (iii) a modification of the voluntary contributor section of that system so that the people of moderate means who were not eligible at present might join it and receive all the medical benefits. (The Association rejected a rate-provided service.) Some difficult problems would arise in regard to the co-ordination and control of such a service. It was suggested that the administration should be taken over by a new composite committee of the local health authority, consisting, as to the majority, of representatives of that authority, and, as to the rest, of representatives of insured persons and all sections of the medical profession.

Dr. R. M. F. PICKEN, M.O.H. for Cardiff, said that as a representative of the public health service he wished to say at the outset that the proposals of the B.M.A. were the best practical contribution to the solution of the problems of a general service which had come to his notice. It had become increasingly clear to those whose administrative responsibilities had brought them into touch with the medical needs of the community as a whole that it was impossible by laisser-faire methods to put at the disposal of its average member the growing body of medical knowledge relating to diagnosis and early treatment. The proposals of the B.M.A. were an earnest of the fact that the medical profession generally realized the need for organization and for some provision of medical services which would be available for those who at a time when they required them most were often least able to pay for them. The type of service required could broadly be said to be attainable by either of two methods—namely, (1) by expansion of the clinical responsibilities of local authorities exercised through whole-time or part-time salaried professional officers, or (2) by a development of what had come to be known as the panel system. A service consisting of whole-time salaried officers was easier to mould into any desired form, and on paper it appeared to ensure that the ablest and most experienced men and women would be placed in the positions of greatest responsibility and that the shortcomings or inexperience of the others would be overcome by the supervision which it afforded. Although it was possible that opposition to a State service would be less strenuous now than it was in 1911, the majority of medical men viewed their relations with their patients as being of a character different entirely from those, say, between a teacher and his pupils. It was also true, thought Dr. Picken, that people had more confidence in the doctors they chose for themselves, and confidence was an intangible element of some importance in medical treatment. It would appear, therefore, that the desired aim could best be obtained, as the B.M.A. suggested, by an expansion of national insurance. It was imperative that a National Medical Service should include, as suggested by the B.M.A., a great extension of post-graduate education among the general body of the profession.

Dr. R. G. MCGOWAN of Manchester said that the scheme of the B.M.A. could be modified if and when found necessary, or adopted gradually, or made to fit changing conditions in many ways. The organization of the scheme, built as it was upon the arrangements of the N.H.I. service, made it easily adaptable, because there were now 15,000 to 16,000 practitioners trained in insurance practice, and it would be comparatively easy for them to absorb new duties as they became available.

Sir WILLIAM E. HART said that an estimate of the cost of the present health services amounted to £195,787,000, and this did not include poor relief; perhaps a national scheme would be an aid to economy.

Dr. W. G. SAVAGE (Somerset) expressed the opinion that in 1930 the medical profession thought the scheme was excellent in general outline. Referring to Dr. Cox's paper, he said he was surprised that nothing had been mentioned of the preventive side of the subject. It was not sufficient just to consider sickness, it was also essential to diagnose the cause of the disease. Dr. Savage said that he had tried to work from statistics prepared by the Insurance Committee, but it had been impossible. Statistics must be kept, that they might be of service for the prevention of disease.

Dr. THOMSON (Belfast) referred to the question of medical practitioners losing some of their professional work through the activities of local authorities. He said there must be discipline in clinics, and pleaded for the matter to be put before a Royal Commission.

Dr. CLYDE MACKENZIE (Belfast) expressed the view that "the public to-day are much more educated, and what they want is prevention, not a cure." If one went through the community as a whole, it would be found that the greater proportion of them were insured for death—and why should they not be insured for health also? If money was going to be spent by the public it must be spent wisely. Dr. MacKenzie claimed that the best people to control the scheme were the Insurance Committees.

Councillor RAMSDEN (Wigan), referring to Dr. Cox's remarks about the fatal tendency of things to become more and more costly if they were put on the rates and taxes than they would be if the user were paying directly, said that he was more interested in the benefits derived out of the rates than he was in the amount of the rates. He advocated putting 5s. on the rates for the whole health service for the whole people. He said that in Wigan a 5s. rate would amount to £100,000. His scheme would provide for the employment of forty medical practitioners at a salary of £1,000 per annum, and £10,000 to be spent for specialists for surgical work. Interest and sinking fund charges would amount to £20,000, but this would not be a recurring charge. There would then remain a balance of £30,000, which under his plan would be utilized for the necessitous sick. As a result of this scheme, the already established maternity and child welfare and poor schemes would be wiped out. Perhaps a 5s. rate would seem heavy, but in Wigan it would work out at rather less than 1s. per week. The average householder was paying more than 1s. per week, and that did not cover his wife and family. In conclusion, he advocated a rationalization of health services. At present the services overlapped, and it was found that only one-third of the money went to health services, the remaining two-thirds going to administration.

Mr. EDWIN POTTS (Durham) referred to the three methods of obtaining money for health services—namely (1) from the State—that is, the taxpayer; (2) from the local authorities—that is, the rates; and (3) from the national health insurance—that is, a deduction from wages. Originally the object of the national health insurance was to benefit industry as a result of the improved health of the workers. After twenty-one years of working, this scheme did not include any benefits for the wives and families of those that paid, and it was to be remembered that the families at present being brought up were the potential workers of to-morrow. He thought that the best people to carry out a general medical service for the nation would be the Insurance Committees.

The president of the National Union of Teachers, Mr. H. N. PENTINGTON, said that a national scheme must of necessity be compulsory; as the cost would be so tremendous it would be impossible to put into effect. Referring to the health of school children, he said it was often impossible for parents to carry out the treatment advised by the school medical officer. He was convinced that greater success would be achieved if the medical officer could carry out the treatment himself.

Professor BENTLEY (Cairo) expressed his approval of a national medical service, and said that in addition it should be compulsory for the whole population to submit medical certificates periodically.

Dr. ALFRED COX, in a brief reply, said he had purposely omitted to mention preventive medicine in his paper because in a conference such as the present one it was certain to be brought up. He said that people who were ill did not think much of the fancy ideals of prevention; they wished to be cured. The session of the conference was then closed by the president, Sir HENRY BRACKENBURY.

CURRENT NOTES

The Badge of the Dublin Meeting

The badge of the Dublin Meeting has been designed by a local member of the Association, Mr. T. G. Wilson, F.R.C.S.I. Mr. Wilson's design is definitely modern in its treatment of the subject.

The badge shows the three castles of the Dublin arms, together with the staff of Aesculapius with its entwined serpent, and the inscription "B.M.A., Dublin, 1933." Members of the Association will each receive a copy of the badge executed in white metal. For the officers, both central and local, and for those of the Sections, the badge will be executed in enamel, several varieties of colour being used. As is customary, the different types of officer will be distinguished by the colour of the ribbon worn, and a bar will describe their office. It is hoped that the recipients of the Dublin badge will value it, not merely as a souvenir of the 1933 Meeting, but also for its artistic qualities. The badge has been manufactured by the Jewellery and Metal Manufacturing Company of Ireland, Kevin Street, Dublin.

METROPOLITAN COUNTIES BRANCH

EIGHTY-FIRST ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING

The annual general meeting of the Metropolitan Counties Branch was held on June 23rd at the British Medical Association House, Tavistock Square. Mr. H. S. SOUTTAR, the retiring president, was in the chair during the earlier part of the proceedings.

The minutes of the last meeting, which had been published in the Supplement, were confirmed, and the chairman then announced the result of the election of officers of the Branch for 1933–4 as under: President-elect, Mr. E. W. G. Masterman; Vice-Presidents, Sir George Badgerow, Dr. S. Monckton Copeman, Dr. Lewis G. Glover, Dr. Gilbert Orme; Treasurer, Dr. William Griffith; Hon. Secretaries, Dr. P. B. Spurgin, Dr. C. J. B. Buchan.

The CHAIRMAN submitted the annual report of the Branch Council. The great event of the year, he said, was the centenary celebration, which, he thought, the Branch carried through with great success. It entailed an immense amount of work for the officials of the Branch, but the result was in every respect worthy of a great occasion. Another event of the year was the reception given to the newly qualified and senior students, at which Mr. Wilfred Trotter gave a most admirable address. The chief matter of controversy had been in relation to part-time consultants and specialists to the London County Council; this, he thought, was now settling down. The whole question had been referred to the Central Council, whose representatives had interviwed the Central Public Health Committee, and the reply of that body was awaited. He concluded with a recognition of the services of Mr. E. A. Taylor, who had retired after having acted as clerk to the Branch for twenty-four years.

The report of the representatives of the Branch on the Central Council was also received.

The chairman next presented the prizes for essays by fourth and subsequent year medical students and practitioners of not more than one year's standing. The names of the recipients have already been published in the Supplement (June 17th, p. 274).

On the motion of Dr. L. G. GLOVER a hearty vote of thanks was accorded to the retiring president and officers, and Mr. SOUTTAR, in acknowledgement, spoke of the excellent spirit in which the work of the Branch had been carried on during the year, and especially the work attaching to the arrangements for the centenary celebrations, the brunt of which had fallen upon Dr. Worley, the honorary general secretary of the meeting, who had controlled every department and infused into it his own energy.

The new president, Dr. C. F. T. Scott, was then introduced and invested with the badge of office, Mr. Souttar saying that for seven years Dr. Scott had been honorary secretary of the Branch, and in that capacity had put in an enormous amount of work.

PRESIDENTIAL ADDRESS

Dr. C. F. T. SCOTT, having taken the chair, and expressed his thanks for his election, proceeded to deliver an address on "The Diminishing Field of Medical Practice." He began by pointing out that the avenues open to newly qualified practitioners intending private practice were threatened with such curtailment as to necessitate very serious consideration of the whole position and of any possible action. Things as they stood were bad enough, and the signs indicated that these were but a foretaste of what was to follow. The contraction of the field of private practice could be traced to Acts of Parliament which forced upon central and local authorities certain obligations and duties of a medical character and the development of national and local medical services. Some of these services were already firmly entrenched, some were in their early beginnings, and others were only in a state of contemplation, having been held back by financial stringency. He instanced in this connexion, first of all, the permissive establishment of clinics for ante-natal and child welfare work, cancer and tuberculosis investigation, orthopaedics, light treatment, and the treatment of minor ailments. There had been an obvious tendency absolutely to ignore the existence of private practice and to develop to the greatest possible extent State and local authority in dealing with these subjects. He spoke particularly of maternity work; not only was ante-natal care given at the clinic, but the woman was taken by ambulance to municipal maternity hospitals or wards for her confinement, in which she was attended by whole-time medical officers or a part-time subsidized specialist. The private practitioner throughout was absolutely ignored, although, from the point of view of medical reasons, as apart from home accommodation, only from 3 to 5 per cent. of maternity cases required institutional treatment at all. All this, together with the practice of midwives, was fast removing the necessary experience of maternity from the private practitioner. It was oblivious of the excellent maternity work which general practitioners had done. In his own district one general practitioner had attended almost 3,000 cases, with only one death, and such records could, of course, be widely multiplied. One medical officer of health in his annual report, after producing his statistics for infant mortality, claimed that the mortality was less among the clinic population than outside; but it was pointed out at once that infants of 1 month and under were not included in the clinic figures, and that if a similar exclusion were made from the other side, the clinic absentees had greatly the advantage, which was, after all, only to be expected. Again, with a very active local authority, cases of infectious disease such as would normally remain within the care of the private practitioner after suitable arrangements had been made in the home of the patient, were removed to hospital. The hospitals themselves, particularly the municipal hospitals transferred under the Act of 1929, illustrated many other encroachments. Many of the hospitals were run with a closed staff, and consequently the private practitioner was not at liberty to follow his patient into the wards. The out-patient policy of hospitals was such as to deflect from the private practitioner large groups of persons who should be under his care. Such departments should be purely consultative, the patients being received only on the introduction of their family doctor, to whom they should be referred back after investigation unless the treatment was of such a character that it could only be given at an institution.

Dr. Scott next glanced at encroachments from another quarter, in the shape of unqualified practitioners, osteopaths, chiropodists, herbalists, sight-testing opticians, and many others, who pursued their work and secured large numbers of patients largely because of the inactivity of the medical profession in seeking to establish its rights and insisting upon a registrable qualification before permission was granted to practise any branch of medicine.

The idea was prevalent that with the advent of specialism urban areas at least had less need than formerly of the general practitioner. That was an error. The general practitioner was as important as ever for the welfare of persons and families in urban communities. Most of the medical care of the inhabitants of towns, as well as country districts, was, and still should be, entrusted to general practitioners. No other kind of practitioner—not even a group or team of specialists—could adequately perform the requisite functions. The question was whether general practitioners were prepared to let the position go by default. The price of freedom was eternal vigilance. An opportunity should be afforded for stating, in a manner which would receive favourable consideration, the private practitioner's claim to a more just and generous judgement from his fellow citizens. Dr. Scott drew attention to the valuable memorandums which the British Medical Association had published—on encroachments, on a national maternity service scheme, on a general medical service for the nation, and on hospital policy. But he doubted whether the suggestions in these memorandums were quite applicable to the situation. It was difficult, for example, for the private practitioner to attend the clinic at appointed times in view of his obligations to his other patients. In Dr. Scott's view the only way out of the difficulty was by some curtailment of the present public health services, which were never intended to be what they had become, still less what they threatened to become.

Dr. C. O. HAWTHORNE, in proposing a vote of thanks, said that no discussion was allowable on a presidential address, although possibly some of those present might like to challenge certain of Dr. Scott's statements. The address, however, had at least this importance, that it was evidence by a first-hand witness. Dr. Scott spoke as one experienced in general practice, and whether his hearers entirely associated themselves with all that he had said or not, they must at least take notice of the fact that here was someone speaking who knew what he was talking about. It might, however, be a fair remark that, whether private practitioners managed to survive or were reduced by a chronic process of inanition to the state which Dr. Scott had contemplated, would depend, not upon their particular ambitions, but upon whether they satisfied in some way or other a public interest. It would be generally agreed that it was a great public interest to have an adequate supply of medical practitioners ready to meet the wants of the public. It was difficult to contemplate the state of matters which would exist if in a large community such as London there were no doctors available in all quarters "to tend broken legs and aching stomachs." The members of the public generally recognized that the members of the medical profession played an essential part in the welfare of the community, and that being so, he could not anticipate the mournful prospect which Dr. Scott had presented, though as one who spoke from experience Dr. Scott had a full right to respectful attention.

The vote of thanks was accorded by acclamation, and the proceedings closed.

National Health Insurance

LONDON INSURANCE COMMITTEE

THE PENSION SCHEME FOR DOCTORS

At the meeting of the London Insurance Committee on June 22nd the question of the pension and insurance scheme for insurance practitioners again came forward in connexion with the deduction of premiums from practitioners' remuneration. The charge for the collection of the quarterly amounts by Insurance Committees has been fixed at one shilling per quarter per subscribing member by the Ministry of Health, but the London Committee has considered that this is an excessive charge, especially in view of the fact that at a total cost of ten guineas per quarter it already deducts from the remuneration of 936 practitioners certain amounts for the voluntary Defence Fund, and also attends without charge to 170 assignments whereby the remuneration of practitioners is paid, at their request, to banks, companies, or other individuals. The committee had given instructions that for the first year no charge should be made. The Ministry of Health has raised objections to this procedure, holding that work of this nature should only be undertaken by bodies administering public funds on a basis which secures the repayment to the bodies concerned of the expenses falling upon them in the performance of functions extraneous to their normal duties. The London Insurance Committee, while still adhering to its opinion, and expressing the view that the pension scheme is one to be welcomed as it will facilitate the retirement from active practice of practitioners who have become unable properly to discharge their duties, feels that, as it is the only committee which has raised any objection to the amount fixed for the cost of collection, and as the department might be somewhat embarrassed if the committee continued its present attitude, the deductions should be made as suggested by the Ministry of Health. The rate is subject to revision at the end of three years, when the question will be reopened.

"DON'TS" FOR INSURED PERSONS

The committee has decided to prepare a leaflet for issue to all insured persons in the county of London. It is in the form of eight "don'ts." Four of them read as follows:

"Don't wait until you are ill before choosing your doctor. Take your card to him as soon a you get it."

"Don't forget to take your medical card with you when you visit your doctor."

"Don't forget that if you want a certificate of incapacity you should ask for it—the doctor will decide whether you may have it."

"Don't forget if you have to obtain treatment from another doctor (a) to make sure he is an insurance doctor; (b) to tell him at once that you are an insured person, and produce your medical card, if possible."

THE LONDON MEDICAL LIST

Figures presented to the committee show that on March 31st last there were 2,171 insurance practitioners in the county of London, as compared with 2,145 on the corresponding date of the previous year, and that there were 1,925,564 persons entitled to medical benefit, as compared with 1,941,611. The average number of insured persons per list, excluding assistants and limited lists, was 1,030; 514 practitioners and 93 institutions had lists of from 1 to 250 persons. The number of practitioners who had lists of over 2,500, implying that they either practised in partnership or employed an assistant, was 148, and one institution had a list of between 2,750 and 3,000.

ABSENCE FROM PRACTICE

An unusual case came before the Medical Service Subcommittee in which a practitioner had absented himself from his practice for a week's holiday, and had considered that, having exhibited a notice of his intention in the waiting room, he was under no necessity of making any arrangements for the carrying on of his practice. He stated that he was under the impression that the rules provided a week's absence, but that a locumtenent had to be provided for any further absence. The subcommittee agreed that on a somewhat cursory reading of Clause 11 (2) of the Terms of Service, isolated from the rest of the terms, a practitioner might feel justified in absenting himself for a week without giving notice to the committee or making arrangements, but it was surely fundamental and inherent in the Terms of Service that patients should not be left without the necessary provision for their medical attendance and treatment. As the practitioner was genuinely under a misapprehension the subcommittee was not disposed to take as serious a view of his failure as it would have done if the breach had been more wilful. It was recommended to the Ministry of Health to deduct £5 from the money payable to the committee, with a view to a corresponding deduction from the remuneration of the practitioner.

LONDON PANEL COMMITTEE

A meeting of the London Panel Committee was held on June 20th, with Dr. H. J. CARDALE in the chair. Dr. R. E. Williams was appointed a member of the committee to fill a vacancy in the representation of Woolwich. The resignation of Dr. B. Arthure, a member representing Fulham, was received with regret. The committee decided to arrange a conference, to take place in October next, with representatives of other bodies concerned in the administration of the Insurance Acts.

HOTEL DOCTORS

Arising out of a case reported by the Ethical Subcommittee, attention was drawn to the attitude of hotel managements in sometimes employing coercion to get their employees to transfer to the lists of hotel doctors. The committee resolved to request its members to supply the Ethical Subcommittee with any definite evidence of this practice which they might be able to obtain in order to secure its discontinuance.

EMERGENCIES

A practitioner attended before the committee to substantiate his claim to a fee on being called in to attend the patient of another practitioner for a sudden attack of fainting. He said that he himself lived and practised in the East End. The patient's insurance practitioner did not live in the neighbourhood, though his assistant did. This practitioner was telephoned for, and the line was reported engaged. The question was raised whether one telephone call when the line was reported engaged constituted an effective message to the patient's doctor. Dr. GREGG, putting himself in the position of a member of the public called upon to deal with someone who had suddenly fainted, said that the caller, having failed once at the telephone, would naturally ring up another practitioner. He thought that the case was justifiably one of emergency. He moved that it be included among those the accounts of which were passed for payment and the fee deducted from the fund. Dr. CHASE seconded, and this was agreed to.

In another case, which was that of a patient with heart failure and in a dying condition, the recommendation was made that a claim for emergency treatment by another practitioner should be disallowed. The practitioner on whose list the insured person was said that his patient suffered from acute pulmonary tuberculosis and bronchitis. He had seen him on the previous afternoon, and found him in a very weak state. He was called by telephone at 4 a.m. next morning, when he told the son that it would be useless for him to go and see the patient. The patient was in no distress, and he knew it was an absolutely hopeless case. The patient died about a quarter of an hour after the second practitioner had been summoned. The first practitioner was called again an hour or two later to see if the patient was dead and to certify to that effect, but he considered that to be a useless visit because the patient, when he last saw him, was a dying man. Dr. GLOVER regretted that an insurance practitioner should have refused to go to a dying patient ; it was that sort of conduct which gave the panel service a bad name. He proposed that the claim of the second practitioner be allowed. The CHAIRMAN pointed out that the patient's practitioner was available but refused to go, and the question was whether that constituted an emergency. The SECRETARY stated that under the regulations the case was not a suitable one for an emergency claim. If the responsible practitioner was available and refused to attend, the practitioner who did go could not have his claim for emergency treatment allowed. The amendment to allow the claim was ruled out of order. In reply to Dr. GREGG and others, the SECRETARY based his contention on an interpretation of the regulations that there could not be an emergency claim unless the practitioner or his assistant was not available. The claim was accordingly disallowed.

This meeting was the last of the committee's year, and warm votes of thanks were accorded to Dr. Cardale and Dr. Gregg, chairman and vice-chairman respectively.

Meetings of Branches and Divisions

BORDER COUNTIES BRANCH: CUMBERLAND DIVISION

The annual meeting of the Cumberland Division was held at Cockermouth on May 18th, when Mr. E. CRAIG DUNLOP was in the chair and nine members were present.

The following officers have been elected:

Chairman, Mr. A. J. Caird. Vice-Chairman, Dr. J. R. K. Thomson. Honorary Secretary, Dr. E. McKerrow. Representative in Representative Body and Honorary Charities Secretary, Mr. N. Maclaren. Deputy Representatives in Representative Body, Dr. C. W. Graham, Dr. R. Connell. Secretary, Border Counties Branch, Dr. G. T. Willan.

The meeting considered the Annual Report of Council. In connexion with para. 98, on maternity service schemes, Dr. W. FRASER read a paper in which he stressed the view, now accepted by the Ministry of Health, that ante-natal care should be carried out by the practitioners responsible for the confinement. A long and interesting discussion followed.

Mr. CAIRD addressed the meeting regarding para. 69 (medical practitioners and road accidents), and referred to a local arrangement whereby the police authorities undertake to pay a fee to practitioners summoned by them to attend road casualties.

Tea was provided by the kind hospitality of Mr. Caird.

EDINBURGH BRANCH: SOUTH-EASTERN COUNTIES DIVISION

The annual meeting of the South-Eastern Counties Division was held at Newtown St. Boswells on May 17th, when Dr. S. DAVIDSON was in the chair and twelve members were present.

The following officers were elected:

Chairman, Dr. K. McLay. Vice-Chairman, Dr. J. Young. Honorary Secretary, Dr. A. A. McWhan. Representative in Representative Body, Dr. J. S. Muir. Deputy Representatives in Representative Body, Dr. S. Davidson, Dr. A. A. McWhan.

The SECRETARY stated that he had been asked by the Edinburgh Branch to draw the attention of members of the Division to the Common Room at British Medical Association House, Edinburgh, where newspapers and various magazines were provided, and tea and light refreshments could be obtained.

It was decided that the annual dinner should be held at the Buccleuch Arms Hotel in October at a cost not exceeding 5s. per head, and that an endeavour should be made to secure a larger attendance of members from a distance. Dr. MUIR drew attention to the fact that the annual meeting of the Edinburgh Branch would be held at Selkirk on June 21st.

Dr. TURNBULL stated that as the result of an inquiry made in Hawick, panel practitioners could not charge for attention on panel patients injured in motor accidents, even though they were on panels other than their own.

In connexion with payment for tonsil and adenoid operations, Dr. McWHAN said he understood that at least two out of the three consultants coming to Roxburgh were averse to the payment of £1 11s. 6d. being reduced.

LANCASHIRE AND CHESHIRE BRANCH: ROCHDALE DIVISION

The annual meeting of the Rochdale Division was held on May 17th, when Dr. W. H. CARSE was in the chair and seventeen members were present.

The following officers were elected for 1933–4:

Chairman, Dr. J. C. Jefferson. Vice-Chairman, Dr. A. Bisset. Honorary Secretary, Treasurer, and Representative in Representative Body, Dr. L. Kilroe. Deputy Representatives in Representative Body, Dr. W. H. Carse, Dr. W. H. Bateman.

Dr. D. P. SUTHERLAND (Manchester) gave a lecture on modern methods of diagnosis and treatment in tuberculosis of the lungs. He said that the use of x rays in diagnosis called for discrimination, and he felt that, in order to obtain comparable results, a greater degree of standardization of methods in screening, photography, room temperatures, and developers was needed. Old tuberculin, when carefully used in graduated doses at intervals of at least eight days to avoid cumulative effects, gave valuable help in many cases. Lipiodol was not employed in definite tuberculous or pyrexial cases, but it helped to demonstrate bronchiectasis. The results of blood sedimentation tests at any rate did not contradict other prognostic signs. Treatment by sanatorium methods did not mean merely fresh air. It stood for discipline, and balance of rest, exercise, and diet under the care of expert physicians. Artificial pneumothorax therapy in suitable cases took about a fortnight to establish, and should be maintained for four to five years to be of real value. A comparison of a fairly large number of cases treated by sanatorium and by collapse therapy did not show any marked balance of good results in favour of either method ; the "cures" in each case were roughly equal.

On the proposal of Dr. HEYWORTH, seconded by Dr. ROBERTSON WILSON, a cordial vote of thanks was accorded to Dr. Sutherland.

METROPOLITAN COUNTIES BRANCH: SOUTH-WEST ESSEX DIVISION

The annual general meeting of the South-West Essex Division was held at Leyton on May 23rd.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Chairman, Dr. J. F. Hill. Vice-Chairman, Dr. A. Rogers. Representative in Representative Body, Dr. P. Boylan. Deputy Representative in Representative Body, Dr. C. H. Panting.

On the motion of Dr. PANTING, seconded by Dr. A. ROGERS, Dr. Helen D. Watson, who had sent in her resignation as secretary, was re-elected, Dr. F. Sanders having promised to act as deputy secretary and relieve her of some of the work.

Dr. BOYLAN asked what the position was with regard to the post of D.M.O. in Walthamstow. The secretary was instructed to write to headquarters on this matter.

Dr. FRANCES IVENS-KNOWLES then gave a discourse on the scope of birth control in preventive medicine. She deplored the aloof attitude which was adopted by the medical profession generally towards this subject, and stressed the fact that if patients could not obtain sound advice from their practitioners they would only seek it from less desirable sources. She reviewed the various methods of birth control available, and drew attention to the benefit to working-class women of careful gynaecological examinations at a clinic in the prevention and early cure of disease.

On the motion of Dr. JARDINE, seconded by Dr. PANTING, a vote of thanks was unanimously accorded Dr. Ivens-Knowles.

SOUTHERN BRANCH: PORTSMOUTH DIVISION

The annual business meeting of the Portsmouth Division was held at Southsea on May 11th, when Dr. A. E. CLARK was in the chair and thirty members were present. The meeting was preceded by a supper, which was attended by twenty-three members.

The following officers were elected for 1933–4:

Chairman, Mr. W. Martin. Vice-Chairman, Dr. C. J. Mayhew. Honorary Charities Secretary, Dr. H. H. Warren. Honorary Clinical Secretary, Mr. C. A. Scott Ridout. Representatives in Representative Body, Dr. H. H. Warren, Dr. H. W. Jeans.

Hearty votes of thanks were accorded the retiring officers, and also Drs. Mearns Fraser and Warren for their infinite care and work in connexion with the annual dance, which realized £100 for the Medical Charities Fund.

Dr. BOSWORTH WRIGHT gave a lucid address on the relation of the municipal hospital (St. Mary's) to voluntary hospitals—especially the Royal Portsmouth Hospital—and the general practitioner. His practical suggestions aroused considerable interest, and led to a discussion.

The annual dinner of the Portsmouth Division was held at Southsea on May 24th, when Dr. A. E. CLARK presided and 140 members and guests were present. A telegram from the King, in response to the Division's loyal greetings on Empire Day, was read:

> "The King, as Patron, sincerely thanks the members of the Portsmouth Division of the British Medical Association for the loyal greetings sent on Empire Day."

The official guests included the Lord Mayor (Alderman W. A. Billing), the Town Clerk (Mr. F. J. Sparks), the president of the Hampshire Law Society (Mr. H. H. Payne), Mr. W. H. Pine-Stone of the British Dental Society, and Mr. F. Hemming, representing the Portsmouth Branch of the Pharmaceutical Society. Dr. T. BEATON proposed the health of the Lord Mayor and Corporation, and referred to the Lord Mayor, who was chairman of the Farm and Garden Committee of the Mental Hospital, as one on whom they could rely for support in any difficulty. Dr. A. MEARNS FRASER, medical officer of health, proposed the toast of "The Guests," and Mr. H. H. PAYNE and Alderman Sir JOHN TIMPSON responded. "The President" was toasted by Mr. W. MARTIN, who said that Dr. Clark was one of the most retiring and modest gentlemen in the profession, who did his work and said very little about it. He had been qualified for thirty years, and was one of the most able men.

During the evening the chairman presented a silver tankard to Mr. J. J. Liston. The tankard was the gift of Dr. Clark to the winner of the Division's qualifying round for the Treasurer's Cup golf competition at the Annual Meeting at Dublin.

SOUTHERN BRANCH: SOUTHAMPTON DIVISION

The annual general meeting of the Southampton Division was held at the Royal Victoria Hospital, Netley, on May 24th, by kind invitation of Lieut.-Colonel H. L. Howell.

The following officers were elected for 1933–4:

Chairman, Dr. S. B. Chambers. Vice-Chairman, Dr. Harold Bower. Honorary Secretary and Treasurer, Dr. John Clayre. Representative in Representative Body, Dr. C. E. Brierley.

The scientific programme of the day included a demonstration of laparotomy under spinal anaesthesia, a clinical demonstration of a number of cases of unusual interest in soldiers from foreign service, and an address by Colonel W. P. MACARTHUR on cysticercosis as a cause of epilepsy.

Members and their families were the guests of Colonel and Mrs. Howell in the afternoon at sports, games, and tea, and they also inspected the hospital. After the meeting the Division were the guests of Colonel and Mrs. Howell and the medical staff of the hospital at supper, when the CHAIRMAN of the Division returned the thanks of the guests for the kind hospitality.

SOUTH-WESTERN BRANCH: PLYMOUTH DIVISION

At a general meeting of the Plymouth Division, held on May 26th, the representative was instructed to oppose the recommendation contained in para. 100 of the Report of Council with reference to fees payable to practitioners under the Midwives Act, but to support the action taken with regard to the ambiguous clause in that Act. The meeting unanimously agreed that the fee of £2 2s. was inadequate, and considered that the Council should press for its increase to £3 3s.

STAFFORDSHIRE BRANCH: NORTH STAFFORDSHIRE DIVISION

A meeting of the North Staffordshire Division was held on June 13th, when Dr. W. C. ALLARDICE was in the chair and ten members were present.

The meeting considered the Annual Report of Council, and the representatives were instructed according to the opinion of the meeting.
